It's not film that's being wound (obviously), just the shutter spring being reset by a small motor.. Luke (our test wizard here at Imaging Resource) thinks I'm nuts, but I still suspect that they chose this winding motor on purpose, because that's what people expect SLRs to sound like (ever notice in the movies that even the smallest point and shoot camera sounds like it has a big professional motor drive?).. It is also designed to streamline tasks for viewing, saving, sending, presenting, as well as printing office documents..
